The L.U.P.T. Centre – Urbanistic and territorial planification laboratory (Centro L.U.P.T. – Laboratorio di Urbanistica e Pianificazione Territoriale) – was born in 1976 from the Experimental Laboratory which was part of Urbanistic in the Faculty of Architecture directed by Prof. Raffaele d'Ambrosio. It is an interdepartmental research centre (art. 89 of DPR 11.07.1980) of the University of Study of Naples "Federico II", built with the D.R. n. 8592 of 22.02.1985 and reorganised with the D.R. n. 258 of 03.02.2014. The Centre “Raffaele d’Ambrosio” (L.U.P.T.) joins together, in an interdisciplinary sense, different lines of research and implements high value research and formation activities in the field of local and sustainable development, both for the public sector and for private industries.

Who are we - The Centre established itself, over time, not only as the place where different subjects comes together but also a real and concrete structure where it is possible to carry out interdisciplinary research activities, communication, high-level formation and project management in the field of local and sustainable development, both for the Ateneo and public administrations and for the private industries on the local territory. Moreover, the centre promotes and realises interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary research and cultural projects of high scientific values in all the fields to all the Departments that participated in its creation or have later decided to opt-in, and in all the subjects covered by single professors and researches that have joined the centre as single individuals.
